

Asheville-Citizen Times
Saturday, October 20, 2007

Speak Out for Kids session

Organizers said more than 280 residents and 100 volunteers from Henderson County gathered to talk about improving children's well-being. During the Speak Out for Kids event, residents brainstormed ideas such as increasing affordable housing and providing more school nurses. The ideas will be compiled into a report in the next month to six weeks, organizers said in a news release.
(3 photos, updated October 20, 2007)

Participants gathered for the Speak Out for Kids event held Saturday at North Henderson High School. Attendees broke into groups to brainstorm ideas for improving children's well-being.

credit: Special to the Citizen-Times

To view website: <http://www.citizen-times.com/apps/pbcs.dll/frontpage>